Article VI. Overtime and Premium Pay Provisions

Section 12. Sunday Work and Holidays

B. Employees shall be paid for the holidays providing they meet all of the following eligibility requirements:

1. During the payroll week in which the holiday is observed:

(a)The employee works or is on a vacation scheduled under the Vacation Plan (Article VII, Vacations) or is on a layoff because he is not eligible for a vacation at the time of a shutdown during the payroll week during which the holiday occurs, or performs jury service, or is a witness in court of law, or is qualified for bereavement pay (Article XXIX, Bereavement Pay) on each of his scheduled days in such week, or

(b)The employee is absent due to personal illness or accident and is not eligible for sickness and accident benefits for such week because of the waiting period, provided he is eligible for and receives sickness and accident benefits for such illness or accident for the following week.

2. The employee has thirty (30) days' seniority as of the date of the holiday.

3. An employee who is scheduled to work on the holiday and is absent without permission for any reason except sickness will not receive holiday pay.

Supreme Court Does Bidding of Corporate Elites as Working People Fight On

June 27, 2018

Statement by AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka on the Supreme Court's decision in Janus v. AFSCME, Council 31:

The Supreme Court's 5-4 decision in Janus v. AFSCME, Council 31, abandons decades of commonsense precedent. In this case, a bare majority of the court, over the vigorous dissent of four justices, has conceded to the dark web of corporations and wealthy donors who wish to take away the freedoms of working people. Until it is overturned, this decision will be a political stain on what is intended to be the most honorable, independent body in the world. But more importantly, it will further empower the corporate elites in their efforts to thwart the aspirations of millions of working people standing together for a better life.

But here's the thing: America is heading in a different direction. All over the country, workers are organizing and taking collective action as we haven't seen in years. More than 14,000 workers recently formed or joined unions in just a single week. This followed a year where 262,000 workers organized and the approval rating of unions reached a nearly 14-year high. Working families know the best way to get a raise, better benefits and a voice on the job is through a union contract. The corporate narrative of the labor movement's downfall is being dismantled by working people every single day.

We have never depended on any politician or judge to decide our fate and we aren't about to start now.
